EARNED INCOME TAX POSTPONED, PARKING, SEWERS, AND TALK

The Warren borough council heard much talking and did a large share of it as the December meeting meandered through sewers that are lacking, parking that isn't, and taxes that won't be. It then heard bids on a truck it didn't buy. And the Burgess resigned, the lucky fellow.

The resolution to act on an earned income tax ordinance was rescinded and the finance committee was given permission to seek advice outside of its solicitor concerning economic methods of collecting such a tax. Solicitor Harper had proposed an ordinance which would have cost a large amount for collecting the earned income tax. He said there was no other legal way. The committee wants to be sure.

Councilman Carbon objected. He saw no reason for a resolution when council had a solicitor who could do the investigating at the request of the finance committee. He wondered if the solicitor would agree if the committee found another way. Finance Chairman Torrance said his committee would make the inquiries with the help of the solicitor and the sources would include the state borough association and the Internal Revenue Department.

PROTEST STAGNANT POOLS

A large delegation was present to protest the Jackson st. parking regulation which limited parking to the north side. Since the widening project was completed there has been a thirty-inch retaining wall erected on the north side, making it impossible for doors to be opened on the curb side and thus creating a hazardous situation. Council changed the ordinance to allow parking on the south side only.

The residents of Jackson ave. also objected to temporary wooden steps built up the steep bank. They were promised corrective changes.

Tenth Ward residents presented a petition protesting the practice of emptying sewage into the old millrace along the Conewango ave., from West to Fifth. It results in open pools and an unhealthy situation since fill has shut off the flow of the millrace. The public works committee has it.

MORE PARKING TROUBLE

East Pennsylvania merchants are not happy about the restrictions against parking on the south side of that avenue. They said so in three petitions and council will study the problem.

The parking meter ordinance was amended to allow a variety of parking times in the business section, including three special corner spots for 15 minutes per nickel. Many will be five cents for a half hour and ten cents for an hour. And there will be progressive meters giving twelve minutes for each penny deposited.

RESCUE VS. C. D.

The differences between the Civilian Defense group and the Warren Rescue Inc. were aired before council by the Rescue spokesmen and council approved the building committee's proposal to hold a meeting with the civilian defense committee and the finance committee for the purpose of coming up with a proposal at the January meeting.

The Rescue group wants land for a building in which to house its $6,000 worth of equipment. No money is sought from the borough. A spot at the foot of Market is being considered.

The Rescue unit claims it has the same status as a volunteer fire department. It is not limited to civilian defense emergencies but will serve under civilian defense officials if called. It claims there is a need for rescue work other than civilian defense. James Keller, William Yeager, Jr., and O. Papalia spoke for the Rescuers.

AND DIVERS OTHERS

Council refused to approve a report of the Chester Engineers on the Sanitary Sewage Facilities because it had not been received in time for study. Councilman Lanman questioned the social security figure on the expenditure page which reads $2,330 against salaries and wages that are a little over $30,000. Action was postponed until January.

Simones and Cook submitted a low bid of $4,595 for a new International dump truck, but the finance committee advised waiting until a budget study had been made. There were six bids received. Mr. Simones agreed to keep the bid open for thirty days.

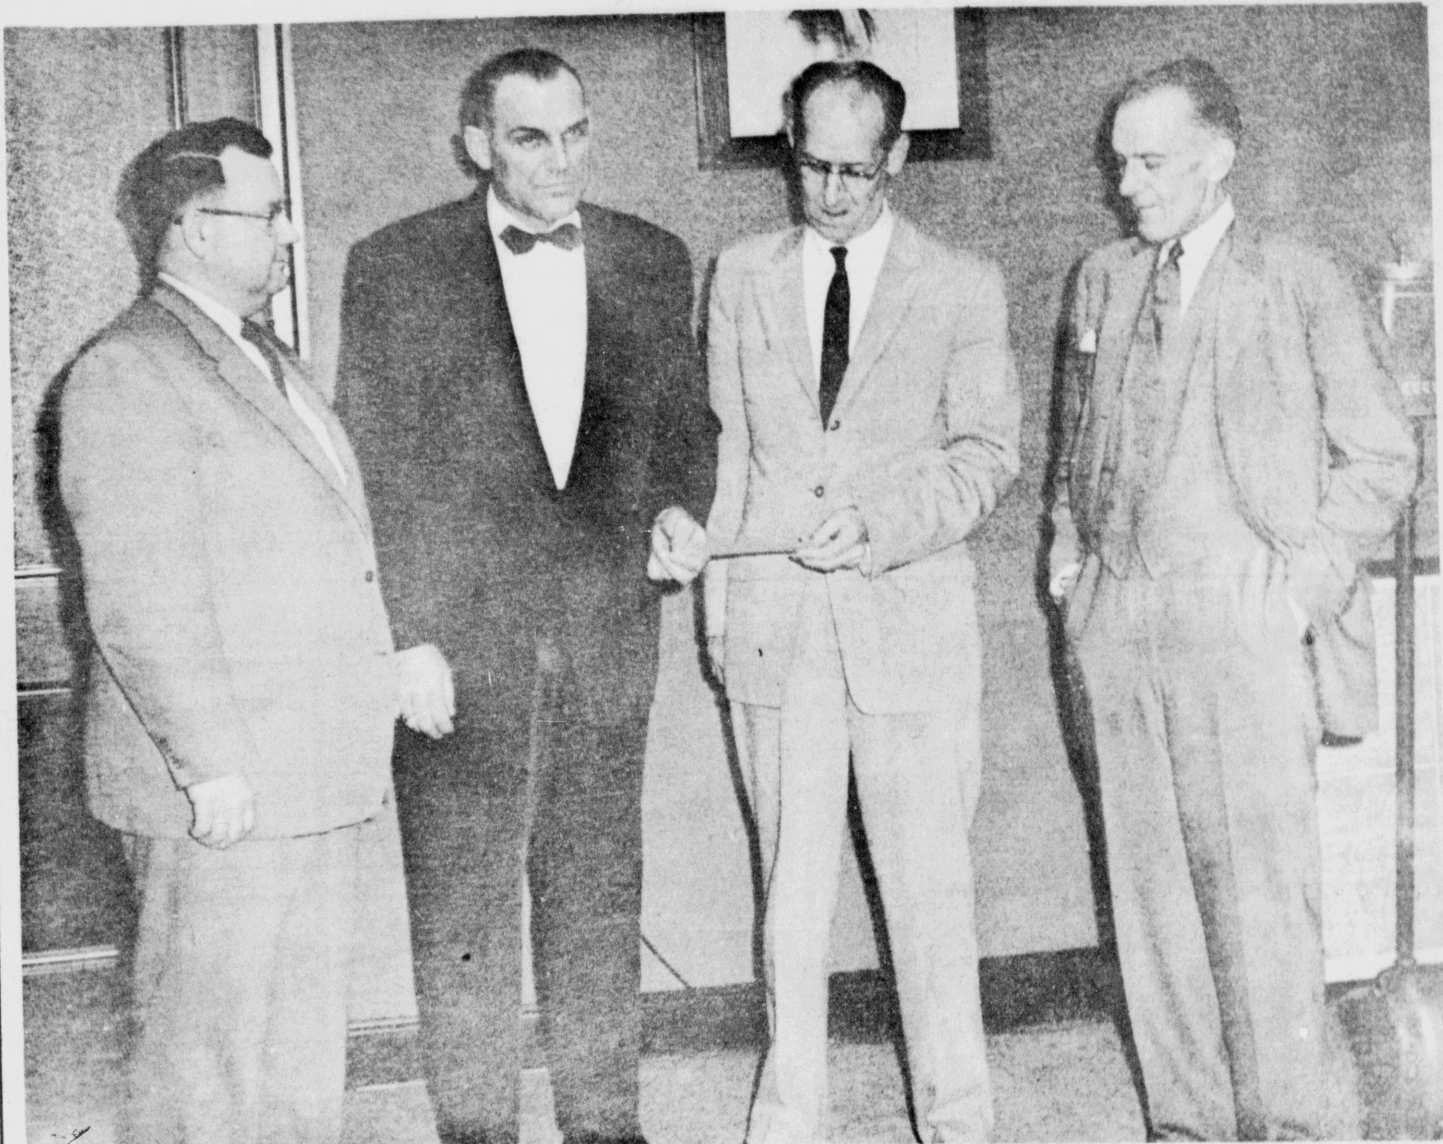

A memorial resolution in honor of C. C. Winans who served for many years on the Board of Health was voted. Dr. G. F. Chimenti was chosen to serve a five-year term on that board.

R. E. Dunham was reappointed to a five-year term on the sanitary authority board. W. E. Miller was reappointed to the civil service commission for six years, and C. A. Miller was reappointed to the board of adjustment for three years.

BURGESS RESIGNS

The resignation of Burgess William E. Rice was accepted and a successor will be named at the January 4 organization meeting. Mr. Rice in his resignation explained that his new office of county treasurer and his present one as Burgess of Warren might be legally compatible, but that it is his personal feeling that the best interests of the two political sub-divisions would not be served. He regretted the termination of eighteen years in the borough government and the pleasant associations therein.

One of the names most mentioned by those considering a successor is William Fuellhart who is well known for his excellent leadership in the civilian defense service.

$437 Check Turned Over To Probation Association

The Warren County Commissioners received a check for $437.97 from the Warren County Probation Association this week in the Judge's Chambers of the Court House.

The check was delivered by E. C. Rasmussen, treasurer of the Probation Association, who stated that it represented interest earned by the Association's Permanent Endowment Fund during the first six months of this year, and was paid to Warren County in fulfillment of the corporate purposes of the Association, to help maintain and improve the probation system for juveniles.

The creation of this Fund, and the payment of the interest to Warren County, encouraged the employment of a probation officer for boys.

Mr. Rasmussen reported that the present balance in the Endowment Fund is $25,156.54. The Fund is held by The Warren Foundation, Inc., and kept invested as a trust fund. The Warren Foundation is a trust organized and patterned after the Mellon Foundation of Pittsburgh. It holds various funds which have been given for like charitable enterprises, such as the Crippled Children's Committee, to keep the monies invested and return the interest as directed by the donor.

The Treasurer's report showed that the Permanent Endowment Fund of the Warren County Probation Association has been built up by five campaigns conducted by members of the Warren Rotary Club. This local service club sponsored the project in 1954 and has raised $5,000 each year through solicitations by the membership. The project was originally set up for five annual campaigns but the Board of Directors has authorized its continuation in view of the long term goal of the Association, and therefore annual campaigns will be conducted by the membership of the Warren Rotary Club.

The eventual use of an enlarged Endowment of the Probation Association is to assist the County officials in establishing a Farm Home for juveniles in the County where they can be sent in lieu of training schools.

Mr. Rasmussen also told the County Commissioners that an additional $1,200.00, the final monies donated in the 1958-59 campaign, would soon be turned over to The Warren Foundation to be added to the Permanent Endowment Fund. This will increase the annual interest to be paid to the County under the currently effective resolution of the Warren County Probation Association.

Mr. Rasmussen also stated that some local groups, Parent-Teacher Associations, and individuals, have already contributed to the Sixth Campaign, 1959-60, so that this campaign will start with a balance of $120.00 before the members of the Warren Rotary Club are asked to solicit donations.

KINZUA DAM EFFECTS

With the government spending money for land in the Kinzua area and showing other tangible signs of doing something very definite about constructing the dam, the talk of preparations for such an eventuality should now cease to be casual chatter. It is time not only for planning but for action.

The labor force for this dam is expected to number about 450. About 360 of these will be provided by Warren, Kane, Bradford, and other neighboring towns and their rural areas. The remaining ninety will come in from other parts.

Of these about fifty will have families and will be looking for housing. The others will live in trailers or rooms. It can be expected that some of the 360 who are from the surrounding area may want to stay near the dam during the week and return home for the week ends.

This does not offer much of a problem but it does suggest that we should be looking for fifty homes or apartments. And it also suggests that much of this money will be spent right in our own stores, stations, restaurants, and other cash register locations.

Over $75 million will be spent for labor. This will be spread over about five years, which suggests we should enjoy a major share of the $15 million per year in wages. It certainly should not hurt the economy, and would be worth the salaries of the two or three extra policemen about whom some have talked so much. Small investment for a $15 million take.

The millions will keep right on coming if we do something about it now. In fact they will come no matter what we do, but it would be wise to control their expenditure. The dam will make a cleaner river, a safer river, and a more useable stream. That means people, and they spend millions!

If our Chamber of Commerce, our area development groups, and our planning commission are not going all-out to prepare for this future they are dragging their feet. We should be coordinating our efforts to assure the right use of the resulting facilities, and we will need expert advice from men who have had such experience.

With millions to be earned, why hesitate about an annual salary that will be commensurate with the knowledge required and the job to be done?

 IKE PROVES OUT POINT

It was said when President Eisenhower was running for office the first time that he would bring a powerful international influence to the White House and that he could effect major gains by traveling to foreign nations where he is admired and is well known.

With one year of his term left to run, his second term, he finally has got around to making that trip. And everything that was said about his popularity is being proved by the admiring throngs which greet him.

But to what effect? He will not be around to follow up his gain. And he has no one with him on the trip who can follow up his conversations effectively.

All of the cheering throngs you can herd together do not settle international problems. They may lend the atmosphere and prove support, but what really counts is what is said by the leaders in private and what is done by those leaders as the result of such conversations.

At least two, and maybe three, previous Presidents have been criticized because they had conversations with foreign officials with only small groups attending them. We now have a man doing it almost alone. The opposition party is not represented at all, and the best state man with him is about to retire from public office.

We doubt if peace can be assured in the actions possible in a few months. About all we can see shaping up in the weeks ahead is a background for Republican politics in the coming election.

And that is too bad, because we may differ and battle over our many domestic issues, but the foreign policy should be bi-partisan and as much out of politics as possible. This has not been helped by the solo trip to charm the Near East's population.

We are pleased that our President is so well liked in many controversial areas, but we are not pleased with short-range view taken by the participants and their very tardy execution of the peace venture.

 HAVE A COUPLE LEFT?

Our idea of real charity at this time is to reach into the dregs of what was a tidy Christmas savings account and give something to those we never will see, but whom we are sure are in great need. Such a gift might be given to CARE, a service we often think of (but not often enough) at other times of the year, but lose sight of in the midst of our busy holiday season.

Why not a dollar or two for this food crusade with which many hungry boys and girls are kept alive in other lands? Mail your dollar or dollars to CARE Food Crusade, 660 First Avenue, New York 16, N.Y.

 IRONY

We find an ironic twist in the sponsor of the NBC series which has covered President Eisenhower's trip abroad. While the government cracks down on a cranberry weed killer and chicken hormones it also bluntly states that cigarettes are killers in the form of cancer. But it does nothing about it.

Meanwhile, a new cigarette cashes in on the million of eyes which are vitally concerned about this trip by the head of our government cashes in with the same old routine about a new kind of filter which reduces the tar more than any other cigarette by various percentages and all the press is talking ad infatigum.

Observations

By Bob Walsh

TV-RADIO CLEAN-UP

The yawns are beginning to appear on the public face as television and radio investigations continue to drag on in Washington. The press is showing far less interest in the Washington hearings. In fact, after the first two days the number of reporters attending the hearings dropped from over a hundred to the representatives of the main wire services and a few specialty writers.

The public is well aware of the rigged quizzes and certainly is naive if it is surprised that disc jockeys were paid to push some records. The public constantly hears and sees in all of the various media of communication free plugs for numerous products.

The same public has been screaming at the ringside of professional wrestling matches and has been tuning them into their living room. Nothing is more phony than a so-called professional wrestling match.

There are few radio announcers who do not provide free plugs to various products, distributors, or promotional efforts on numerous occasions. And the newspapers are well sprinkled with successful efforts to gain free space.

SOLUTIONS

There are many solutions available for study, ranging from complete government control to pay television. Though we believe that pay television should be given a trial so that the public may make a choice, we do not believe it is the entire answer to the misuse of the industry. There still would be room for under-the-table pay-offs in subtle, and many not so subtle, ways.

We believe the television and radio problem is basically one of control and influence. If you can find ways of minimizing the power of those who provide the money which makes these forms of communication practical, freedom as we choose to think of it can continue on the air.

We hesitate to point to the press and magazines as prime examples of what can be done to correct the situation, but they can be used as measures for basic steps that must be taken if private freedom in broadcasting is to be continued. They provide the potential answer, and the right federal laws teamed with the best of public opinion might make it work.

OUR SLANT

We believe that television and radio have been treated as mediums through which manufacturers may reach potential buyers. The advertiser has been in full control, and because the public has looked at both radio and television as airwave playgrounds, whatever has been dreamed up by those fighting for attention has been accepted.

We have failed to separate our communication service from our advertising facility. We have overlooked the basic character of both radio and television.

And this is where the possible parallel with newspapers and magazines can serve as a guide to corrective action. Though many poor examples may be found on your news stands, the framework is there for all of us to rightly apply.

When television and radio gain enough backbone to run their own business, major improvements will result. When they treat their air time as a communication service and sell it as such they will be their own boss. The advertiser will not dictate.

Newspapers do not sell their various columns to sponsors. They sell only space, and unless an advertiser wants to pay for preferred consideration no well organized and practical publisher will concede to demands for special position.

Ads are not sold as sponsors of columns or features by various writers. Space is sold. And if a page must be made up to serve the demands of an advertiser who always wants to be placed in a certain spot there is an extra charge for the cost of complicating production.

This is not to say that primetime should not be worth more money. Obviously it is, and for at least two reasons. Prime time has a larger listening audience, and scheduling an advertiser to a specific minute involves more planning and scheduling at increased cost to the station or network.

But the broadcasters must become their own bosses. They must run their own shows.

They have a major obligation as communication services and they must fulfill that obligation, even as (and we hope better) the press and magazine industries do. There must be a separation of communication from commercialism.

* PRESSURE VS. FACTS

A leading spokesman for the television and radio industries presents our theme very nicely. He emphasizes that the purpose of advertising is to pressure, influence, and sell. The purpose of communication is to provide facts and to inform.

There is a tremendous difference, but they must live side by side. While so living they must be completely separated so that the pressuring character of one does not influence the objective work of the other.

That is why we say the press has the right framework for teaming the two. The press may not always succeed, as we have pointed out on numerous occasions, but it has the means.

As television (and radio) is operated today, it lacks this separation. And as long as advertising dollars are required to finance communication media the lamb and the lion will find it a difficult task. But if the framework is there the public will be given an easier way of judging. That which has stepped over the line will be more plainly seen.

* ONE OTHER ANSWER

There is another simple solution.

If the public wishes to pay the full price of providing its newspapers, magazines, and entertainment by air there are those who would be delighted to accommodate. This may be done by pay tv. We have seen no possibility of it succeeding in press circles.

* Separate communication responsibilities from advertising sales pitches, but let them live elbow to elbow. It can be done by the conscientious. There always will be those who will abuse it.

BUYERS' CORNER

BIG AUTO SHOW

The biggest auto show in its twenty-six years of exhibiting cars is expected to be seen in Pittsburgh next January. Fourteen American manufacturers and several foreign producers will be represented in the Hunt Armory, in East Liberty, from January 9 to 16.

There also will be many prizes and the usual Toddlers Sweepstakes which invites photo entries of Tri-state children under six. There also is the Cop on the Corner contest in which school children compete by writing a twenty-five word essay on their favorite policeman.

Entries for these contests can be mailed to Auto Show, Park Building, Pittsburgh 22, Pa., January 2 is the deadline and the winners will share $625 in savings bonds.

DON'T WASTE YOUR MONEY

Buying a really nice Christmas present requires much planning and sometimes much subtle detective work. Most of us like to give something really "big" that the recipient has always wanted but never believed they would get.

Efforts to make this come true too often result in costly purchases that do not fit the needs of the "lucky fellow". A column by Buck Rogers who writes Let's Go Fishin' touches on this with examples of outlandish purchases, such as the wife who bought her husband a new canoe and a seventy horse outboard motor to propel it. And the lady who gave her husband a $100 salt water reel for his fly rod.

He goes on with some not so clever ways of letting the little lady know what you want. What he has to say about fishing applies to any sport you can name, and also to his choice of gifts for the kitchen or milady's back.

Though it is a big Christmas when we give someone something exceptionally nice that they always have wanted, it can be a most unhappy one if that effort provides an item that is costly but useless. The wrong golf club, a fur piece she does not like, and similar misjudgments are nightmarish experiences for most of us.

Unless you can very smoothly work the information out of the object of your affection, or from his (her) friends, you have an alternative in these days of efficient shopping that will not be quite as exciting as the gift in hand but certainly much more satisfactory. We speak, of course, of the "gift certificate", or a dummy which can be replaced.

But fortunate is the husband or wife who can smoothly arrive at the right item and have it under the tree ready for handling and use on an exciting Christmas morning. It will require some doing, but it is worth it if the recipient is someone you truly love and want to make very happy on this wonderful day.

If your giving at Christmas lacks this touch you are mechanically going through the motions. You are missing much out of life, both at Christmas time and throughout the rest of the year.

NOT TOP GRAIN

Billfolds sold by Esquire Manufacturing Co., Inc. and F.H. Leather Products are not made of top grain leather as implied by the words "Top Grain Cowhide" stamped on them. They are made of split leather that is inferior to top grain, says the FTC which has charged them with misrepresenting the quality of their wallets. Esquire also is challenged in its use of the word "manufacturing" in its trade name because it does not make the wallets and billfolds it sells.

COLGATE NOT PROTECTIVE

The "protective shield" Colgate Dental Cream is supposed to provide as dramatically demonstrated on television is deceptive advertising, says the FTC. The protection with Gardol pitch is unfounded inasmuch as the dentifrice does not completely protect users' teeth against tooth decay or the development of cavities by forming a protective shield or otherwise, as claimed in the advertising, says the formal complaint. (We wonder if anyone really believes these dental claims?)

NOT SAFE

The Allchem Manufacturing Co., Inc. has been ordered to stop claiming that its Kill Flame fire extinguisher is non-injurious to health or that it is effective in putting out all types of fires. The extinguisher's chemical components decompose on hot surfaces and give off highly toxic substances which may be harmful or lethal in a closed room or when ventilation is not provided.

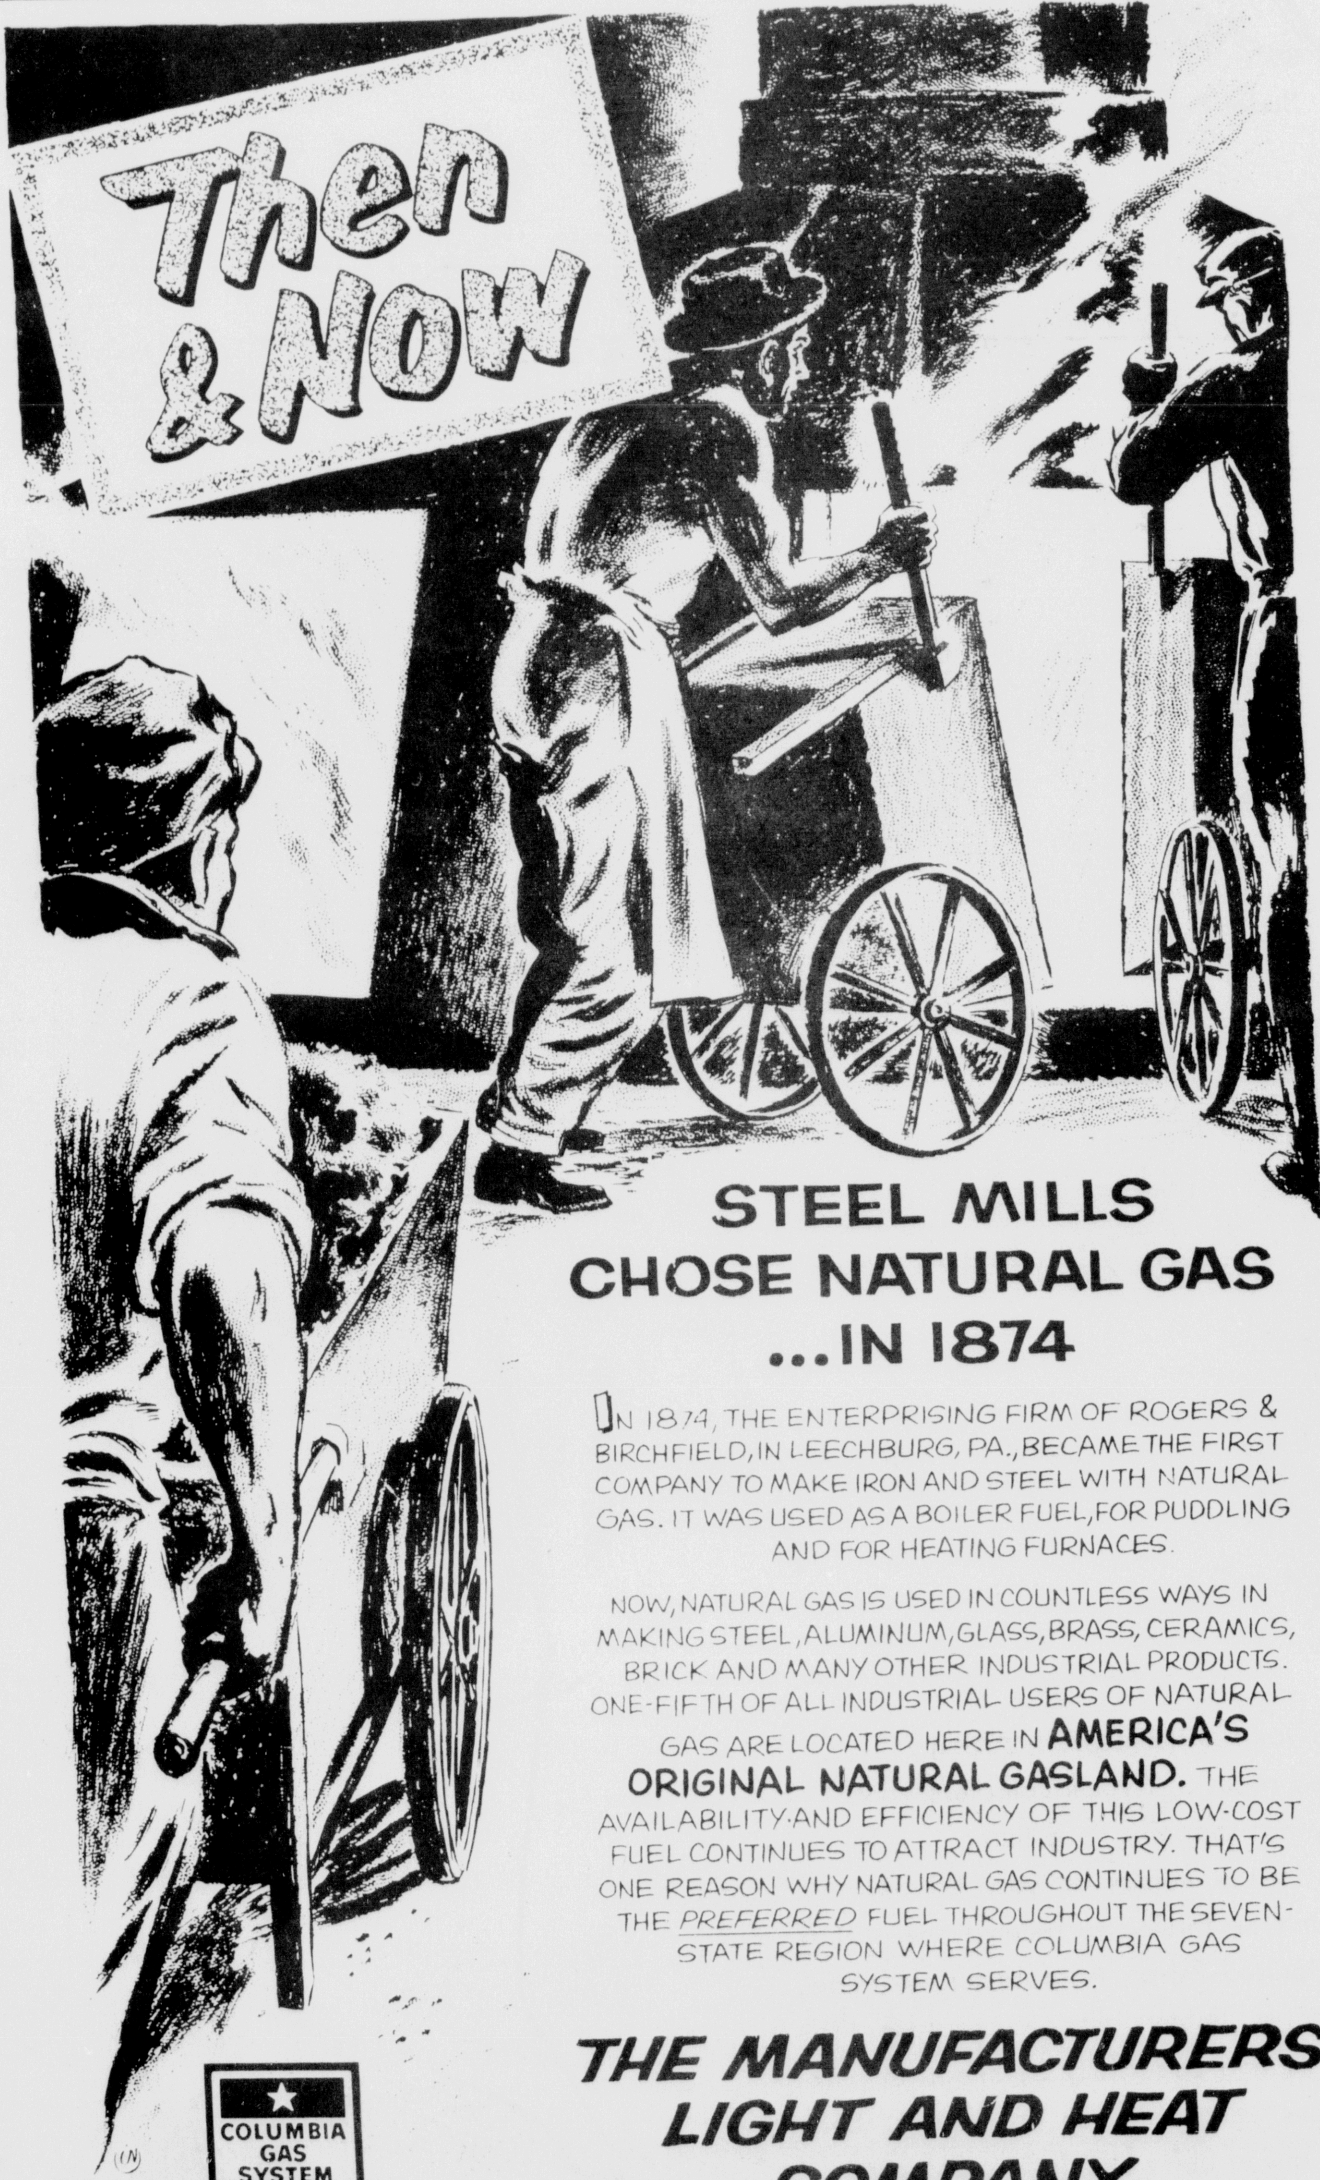

The FTC examiner also stated that the Kill Flame is not effective in extinguishing subsurface or deeply seated fires in ordinary combustible materials such as wood, cloth, and paper.

Ike May Have Strengthened Nehru

by Marquis Childs

NEW DELHI. -- The meeting between East and West that has taken place here must go down as one of the most improbable encounters in history. Jawaharlal Nehru, the high-caste Brahmin educated as a Fabian socialist, has next to nothing in common with the boy from Abilene, Kansas, who became a soldier-hero to the world.

Yet they do share one vital interest and that is peace. By a curious set of circumstances this shared interest happens to be not only ideological but personal. It fits an essential need in each man's destiny and the record of history.

For Nehru the timing of the Eisenhower visit could not have been more fortunate. He has been under heavy attack from many quarters over the success of the Chinese incursions across the McMahon Line. His critics charge that Nehru knew of these incursions even at the time of the Bandung Conference when the love affair between India and Communist China was in its outwardly happiest phase.

There is a sense of letdown, of deception even with the reputation of India's great man, the inheritor of the tradition of Gandhi, dimmed. Aggravating this is Nehru's insistence on keeping V. K. Krishna Menon as Secretary of Defense despite the anger and indignation directed at him as one of the prime movers of the "be nice to China" policy.

On the day of Eisenhower's arrival Nehru in Parliament seemed to his critics to come nearer to facing up to the threat of an aggressive China than he has done at any time. He said, in effect, that the two great Asian powers -- China and India -- were in opposition and this fact of life would have to be taken into account for an indefinite future as India rapidly built up its strength, both military and industrial. And then welcoming the President of the United States he could say to his critics, here, gentlemen, is the proof of the wisdom of my policy of peace -- the presence of this pilgrim who has come so far in his own search for peace.

When Eisenhower invited Khrushchev to Washington he underwrote the new conviction with which Nehru has fortified his belief that war and even preparation for war can be avoided so that India will have an opportunity to build up her production and living standards. The heart of this conviction is that Russia is opposed to China's present policy and would in a showdown side with India.

To some observers this seems almost as insubstantial a hope as that Red China would be guided by the spirit of loving kindness and neighborly cooperation.

But as evidence Nehru cites the Eisenhower-Khrushchev talks and Khrushchev's own seeming effort at neutrality in the Chinese-Indian quarrel.

Eisenhower's personal stake in his encounter with India is obviously his place in history. It would have been so much easier to have sat out the last year in the White House. The image projected by this extraordinary physical effort is of a crusader giving his last best effort to save the world.

Eisenhower is deeply sincere in his quest. He has certainly made a beginning which, quite apart from whatever interpretation self-servers may put on it, is widely recognized here as taking the world at least a short step away from the brink of war. The effort of the Eisenhower Administration to get an agreement to end nuclear tests under a system of control and inspection rates high in uncommitted Asia where the dread of nuclear fallout is an obsession among intellectuals.

Similarly the real advance toward at least damping down the cold war represented in the approach to Khrushchev fits with the deep-seated belief in the power of negotiation. In the same way immediately after the summit conference in the summer of 1955 Eisenhower was for India a hero of peace.

One quality the two crusaders for peace -- the high-caste Brahmin and the soldier-hero -- have in common and that is a very high order of charm. In Eisenhower this takes the form of a warm personal persuasiveness. Nehru's charm is his brilliance, the fascination of a highly cultivated mind that ranges over the whole field of knowledge with a play of wit and intellect that is irresistible. A Congressional committee that recently stopped in Delhi included some of Nehru's doarest doubters and critics. After two and a half hours with him they came away captivated.

It is quite possible that this element of charm lends an aura of hope and belief to the current exercise that is hardly justified. As with Eisenhower's speech to the Indian Parliament, and for that matter with all his utterances on this journey, the good intentions are there, the noble idealism, but the lack is in depth and substantiality.

We are told far too little of what and how. Among the many contrasts that set the two men apart -- one with special significance for this moment -- is the future each man faces. Eisenhower is soon to put down the burden of office. In India there is no one visible who can replace Nehru.

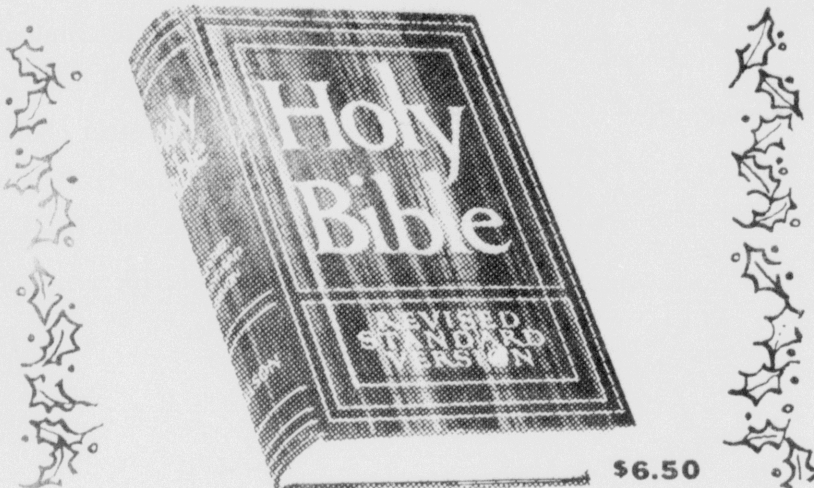

While his position, his effectiveness perhaps, has been impaired by the Chinese crisis and the attacks directed at him, he will stay in power so long as he lives. He must continue to wrestle with problems that throughout the 10 years of India's independence have seemed insoluble.

On the immediate and practical level he must soon choose between Krishna Menon and the Chief of Army Staff General S. K. Thimmayya. They have been at daggers drawn over the defense establishment and how to meet the Chinese threat.

In the larger sphere he must decide whether to encourage private enterprise and give added incentive to foreign capital or to continue to try to build up the government sector in the economy. He has seen the conservatives in the Congress party, men who believe in caution and going slow, exercise increasing authority encroaching on his prerogatives.

During the difficult months of the late summer and fall he has given his family and associates cause for concern. They feared he was faltering, they sensed in him something like despair. But he seems now to be emerging from his mood of pessimism, and one reason surely is the visit of the optimistic American with his message of peace.

JOINT SCHOOL BOARD REORGANIZES; NEW HIGH SCHOOL 30% COMPLETE

At its annual reorganizational dinner-meeting in Beaty cafeteria Monday evening the Warren Area Joint School Board re-elected to office Melvin G. Keller as president and Norman W. Grosch, vice president. Mr. Keller, who just last week was named head of the Warren Borough School Board for his 15th term, has been president of the Joint Board since the formation of the jointure in 1953. Both men were put into office by a unanimous vote.

30 PER CENT COMPLETE

Dr. Carl E. Whipple, superintendent of schools, reported to those present that the new high school building should be one-third finished according to the construction schedule. It is estimated that it is 30 per cent complete at this time.

He further pointed out that three loads of structural steel for the third unit of the school have been received and that the remainder of the steel for the building has been promised for some time this week.

CURRICULUM OUTLINED

A short address by Henry Powell, principal, outlined for the board members the curriculum of the Beaty Jr. High School.

He pointed out that the junior high school is an exploratory school for the adolescence age group and not a terminal school such as the high school. "We make them ready to make decisions when they reach the high school level", he stated.

Mr. Powell covered a four-point program, dealing mainly with the new seventh graders, as he outlined the school's curriculum. These points were Orientation, Scheduling of Students in Classes, Guidance, and Recognition of Individual Differences.

In touching on the latter category, Mr. Powell explained briefly the program now in operation at Beaty by which students are placed in three groups -- A, B or C (above average, average, below average). By doing this the students are instructed on their own level. The ability grouping is based on IQ tests, teacher opinion, ability tests, etc.

The principal also mentioned that the school has been teaching advanced mathematics--algebra in the eighth grade and geometry in the ninth year. Next year the school hopes to offer foreign languages.

In closing he stated that a comprehensive school offers a good course for the gifted student, a good course for the slow learner, and a well-balanced program including such activities as music, art, shop, etc. Also, the necessary teaching equipment and good teachers to go with the program.

IN RECOGNITION

On motion of Wallace Cowden, duly seconded and unanimously adopted, the following resolution was ordered spread upon the minutes of the Joint Board meeting and a copy thereof transmitted to the family of Cecil C. Winans:

"Cecil C. Winans was born on April 9, 1903, spent his early years in Crawford County, and was a graduate of Allegheny College. He moved to Warren, Pennsylvania, in 1927, and spent the rest of his life here in the pursuit of his insurance business, the raising of his family and in generous support of all community activities.

"He was an active member of the Methodist Church, of the Kiwanis Club, of the Masonic body, and took a deep interest in the sporting activities of the community, particularly in the Field and Stream Club. "His interest particularly was invoked in the education of the youth of the community, and the improvement of educational facilities in Warren. In 1953 when the expansion of Beaty Junior High School was proposed, he was elected by the Warren Boro School District as a member of the Warren Area Joint School Authority, was elected Chairman by the Authority and served as such Chairman until his death. The program for the new high school in the area was developed through the Warren High School Authority which was organized in 1958, and Mr. Winans was appointed to that Authority as its Chairman until his death.

"His vital interest in the school program led him to devote a large part of his time to the development of the plans for the schools, for the construction contracts, and for the enumerable details of the projects; and he gave generously of his time, interest and devotion to these projects.

"As a citizen of public spirit and as a personal friend to all who were concerned for a better life in the community, he is affectionately remembered. Particularly does the Warren Area Joint School Board express its appreciation for his public service in the Community and the warm remembrance that the members of the Joint Board personally have of his friendship and devotion to their common educational cause.

"His sudden death on November 3, 1959 brings sorrow to the community and to the members of the Joint Board; and the Joint Board hereby resolves to note permanently in its records its appreciation of the friendship of Cecil C. Winans to them, and of his major services to the education of youth."

Antiques

We offer for sale for Christmas, Birthday and Anniversary gifts and other notable occasions, the most diversified collection of antiques in America, from the lowest in price to the highest. See our Philadelphia Chest-on-Chest, the finest Chest that has come up for public sale since the Reifsnnyder million dollar sale, years ago. We wrote the Curator of the Museum of Fine Arts, in Philadelphia for an authentication of the maker. He replied that the Museum had only one Philadelphia Chest-on-Chest on which he could give the authentication and he wasn't sure of that but that our Chest "was so fine and so beautiful that it didn't need any authentication". The Associate Curator of the Henry Francis DuPont Winterthur Museum, Winterthur, Del., said that "it was a handsome and important example of the Philadelphia style".

See our Goddard Writing Desk. In our opinion, there is not one as good in the Metropolitan Museum, New York City, The Boston Museum of Fine Arts or the Karolik collection.

See our mint "Clews Landing of Lafayette" — 48 pieces — the finest collection in America. See the 387 pieces of Mrs. Wm. K. Vanderbilt's silver & the 17 pieces of Goelet silver.

We also have 153 pieces of the George M. Curtis collection of silver. Mr. Curtis authored 2 books on silver — one was "Early American Silver of Connecticut and Its Makers", the other was "American Church Silver". He was one of the finest collectors in New England. In short, see the finest collection of antiques that ever came to this part of the state and, in all probability, that ever will come. Remember there is no better investment than a good antique, well bought — so Babson says and we fully agree.

JT. COMMITTEE ELECTS OFFICERS, HIRES TEACHERS, PAYS BILLS

After considerable delay Monday night the joint school committee of the Warren Area Joint School Board convened at 9:30 o'clock, scurried through a lengthy agenda in less than an hour, excused the press (they were the only visitors) and adjourned for a closed teachers' meeting.

As is the custom at the organizational meeting, the same officers elected to the Warren Area Joint Board earlier in the evening were named to the committee. They were Melvin G. Keller, re-elected president, and Norman Grosch, re-elected vice president.

Chosen to the Warren Area Joint School Board Authority and the Warren Area High School Authority by their respective boards were Howard Lauffenberger, Warren Borough representative; Fred Bauer, Clarndon; and Kenneth Sorenson, Elk twp.

The Authority aiding with the building of Beaty addition has retired $10,000 worth of bonds in addition to the regular amount scheduled for retirement.

The resignations of Mrs. Seloy Weishofer and Mrs. Marguerite Hedman were accepted effective the end of the first semester, January 29, 1960; Mrs. Evelyn Davidson and Mrs. Ruth Huber were employed as substitute teachers; Miss Evelyn Bernhard was employed as a teacher beginning September, 1960, and Gary Kreisler and Richard Mitchell were employed beginning February 1, 1960.

COMMENCEMENT PROGRAM

Committee members approved the Commencement program for next June and learned that Maj. Gen. Frank A. Bogart has accepted an invitation to address the seniors at the exercises.

Events and dates of the Commencement are Saturday, June 4, Junior-Senior Prom; Sunday, June 5, Baccalaureate; Monday, June 6, Senior Class Dinner (last day for seniors in regular school); Tuesday, June 7, Class Picnic at Conneaut Lake; Thursday, June 9, Commencement at Beaty.

Caps and gowns will be rented from the National Cap and Gown Co. at the rate of $1.95 for boys' and $2.70 for girls' gowns.

It was voted to pay orders written during the month amounting to $1377.50. Also, $80, recreation services; $880, substitute teachers employed; and $894.89, janitor's overtime.

Certificates of payments listed for construction work on the new high school were $123,786 to Branna Construction, general contractor; $45,426, Sans Corp., for heating; $2,481, architectural fee of Meyers, Krider, Werle & Ellenberger. A bill for $410 was presented by Gillis Brothers for eight test holes at the school site.

Bids for new high school furniture are to be let and the committee approved hiring secretarial help to handle the additional work.

Mrs. Margaret Tickner was engaged as a full time office worker, homebound instruction was granted high school students Patty Schmitz and Cathy Sparks, and reports were accepted from the school physician, school nurses, dental hygienist and home and school visitor.

AFTER-SCHOOL TRAINING

After-school driver training was approved for students (at no cost) and adults, as possible. The request was made by the driver education instructor.

A Masonic order had requested permission for the formation of a DeMolay Chapter (organization for young men), but it was the consensus of the joint committee that this particular organization does not fall within the limits of the high school. The request was made due to a ruling passed several years ago by the board which refused members of high school fraternities and sororities participation in any junior or senior high activities.

A special account report indicated the cafeterias in the junior and senior high buildings were running at a loss of $682.19, as of the end of November. Bills to be paid amounted to $2,500, loan from the school board; and $6,165.47, for food. Cash available -- $3,178.92, bank balance at the end of the month, and $4,804.36, reimbursement due from the government for September, October and November.

Smut In Mail Is Affecting Our Youth

by Inez Robb

Smut via the mails used to be in the same category as the weather. Everybody talked about it. Period. But the last session of Congress beefed up the 1956 law that permits the Post Office Department to impound mail addressed to a person suspected of sending out obscene matter. A Congressional subcommittee is holding hearings around the country on the $500,000,000 pornography racket.

In Indiana, Gov. Harold W. Handley is behind a state-wide campaign to get "trash literature" off the newsstands. The governor is activated by surveys showing that juvenile delinquency drops when smut disappears from the stands.

And finally, Postmaster General Summerfield has just appointed a national committee to advise him and aid him in his war on the sale and distribution of smut via the mails to children -- a racket so loathsome, so sickening as to demand a punishment that adequately fits so shocking a crime against kids.

Under the new law, 10-year prison sentences have been meted out to men and women who would deliberately debase children with pornography. Sentences of from three-to-five years are now general. This is surely a step in the right direction. But I am still not convinced that a touch of the lash in such cases wouldn't be salutary, too. The kind of men and women who engage in the revolting spread of commercialized pornography among children are themselves so beyond the pale of decency, so base that they cannot be treated as ordinary criminals.

For years, J. Edgar Hoover, local police authorities, judges, and youth experts have pointed to obscene literature, flooding the mails and newsstands, as a prime cause of juvenile delinquency and sex crimes.

Mr. Hoover has described this traffic in obscenity directed at the young as "America's ugliest racket." That is no hyperbole. The moral hyenas involved in such a business deserve neither sympathy nor regard of any kind from their fellow men. What they deal in is spiritual poison aimed at the debauchery of young people and border-line adults.

It will be interesting to see what advice or help Mr. Summerfield expects from his committee of distinguished citizens. The case of commercialized smut is clear cut. There is no border line here to confuse the issue.

But does Mr. Summerfield expect his committee to deal with an entirely different field, say that of "Lady Chatterly's Lover" and similar literature? The Postmaster General is still fighting to keep D.H. Lawrence's novel out of the mails.

If the committee is asked to wrestle with this problem, it will need the wisdom of Solomon. No democratic society has ever yet been able to come up with a foolproof definition of the thin line between liberty and license. One of the weariest cliches in this battle is to point out that there are passages in the Bible and in Will Shakespeare that are not for little pitchers.

Literature, the drama and the cinema cannot be boiled down to the 12-year-age level, the charge continually thrown at Hollywood. I find "Lady Chatterly" too dull to get past page 50. But if there are other adults who want to read it, that's their business. The problem of the government is to keep smut out of the mails and of parents to keep adult literature where it belongs.

Bus fares in most cities run about 25¢ . . . 50¢ for a round trip every working day.

IN THE GREAT TRADITION

The Nielsen ratings, that ridiculous and senseless arbiter of what is inflicted on the American people, still harbors a great many Westerns in its upper echelons, so I took a look the other day to see what, if anything, had changed in the land of the great outdoors. I look upon this as a public service. I never met anyone who looked at shows with good ratings like

"Gunsmoke" so I figure you folks can find out what goes on in my column and then you won't have to look.

Well, sir, "Gunsmoke" opened like a house afire with Marshal Dillon (he's the hero, city slicker, played by James Arness who is nine feet tall) stopping a buryin', investigating the coffin which is full of rocks in place of a corpse. Just where the body was and how it all came out was a pretty interesting story, ending in the dynamiting of a gold mine. But what especially caught my attention was not the writing which is spare, "Where were you the night of January 16?" type of dialogue, as the acting which is unspeakably picturesque.

There's no doubt about it--Hollywood abounds in immensely experienced character actors and "Gunsmoke" is awash with snuffling, sniffing, creaking, bearded cigar-chawin', spectacle-fingerin' varmints who act the very daylight out of their small roles. Arness himself is in the greater Gary Cooper tradition of Stone Faces and this procession of picturesque minor characters, shuffling and scratching and hemmin' and hawin', makes a very effective counterpoint to him.

The last time I sampled "Paladin," the story was about a lady who hired Paladin to find out who was wrecking her lumber mill. Turned out the lady was the villain herself. This has been the pattern on Paladin. Virtuous but weak men (except Paladin himself who is neither weak nor especially virtuous) and domineering and wicked women.

This was a story about an English lord who was out hunting with his sister Charity, by name, when accidents start happening. "It's the girl," I said to myself. By George, it was, too. She was at the bottom of the whole thing. Wanted the estates and the money for herself, she did. I don't know who's responsible for the anti-feminist slant of Paladin but it's tough on women. The men aren't particularly appetizing either.

The other Western I sampled was "Bat Masterson." This is the man with the gold-headed cane, the string tie, and the sneer whom I found engaged in fixing a horse race. Well,

40 ET 8 FIGHTS
COLOR DISCRIMINATION

It always has seemed a bit inconsistent to us for an organization which is supposed to represent the war veterans of our nation and sets itself up as a fighter for Americanism and true freedom to exclude from its membership citizens of this nation whose skin is of a color other than white. But this is true of the American Legion. The 40 et 8 has opposed this policy and now has been separated from the Legion because of its efforts to remove the word "color" from membership requirements.

Following is an explanation of the local situation as provided by the 40 et 8 officials:

At an emergency special meeting of the Warren County 40 et 8 held December 8 at the Warren Legion Home, the members present decided to present to the public the local organization's stand in the dispute between the National 40 et 8 and the American Legion over membership restrictions.

The 40 et 8 works hard and quietly at humanitarian causes. It was a pioneer in starting the Legion's child welfare program and every member still contributes each year to this cause. They are also the top recruiter for membership in the Legion. In addition the 40 et 8 provides a nationwide Nurses Training Program.

The local group is sponsoring a student nurse at the Hamot Hospital in Erie, providing tuition and other expenses. They maintain a Child Welfare Program throughout the County, a Veterans Service Program, and a Welfare Program for Veterans.

Following their meeting of November 4, 1959 this letter was sent to John M. Hobbie, Chef de Chemin de Fer, 40 & 8, National Headquarters in Indianapolis, Indiana.

November 10, 1959

John M. Hobbie
Chef de Chemin de Fer,
Voiture Nationale
La Societe Forty et Eight,
777 North Meridian St.,
Indianapolis 4, Ind.

Dear Chef de Chemin de Fer Hobbie:

Voiture No. 941, Warren County Department of Pennsylvania held their November 4th 1959 promenade at the American Legion Home, Warren, Pa., the matter of the American Legion and Forty et Eight controversy over the word "white" in our constitution was discussed by our membership and we are very much disturbed by the adverse publicity the Forty et Eight is receiving nationwide in newspaper and other media. We believe the Forty et Eight leadership has been remiss in its duties in ever permitting this condition to reach its present status,

WHEREAS:

In view of the controversy between the American Legion and the Forty et Eight over the word white in our constitution, and

WHEREAS:

We deplore the bad press and public relations existing today, and

WHEREAS:

Voiture 941, Warren County, Pennsylvania is withholding dues until this controversy is settled, and

WHEREAS:

Our most important function is to serve the American Legion
BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED:
That the Chef de Chemin de Fer take immediate steps to eliminate the word white from our constitution.

Your attention will be appreciated.

Yours very truly,

Voiture Locale No. 941,
Warren County Pennsylvania

MERCHANTS SCORE 73 - 68 VICTORY OVER BUSY BEE

The Sheffield Merchants remained as the only unbeaten team in the City League after Monday night's action as they downed the Busy Bee five, 73-68. The Beemen vaulted to a first period lead of 18-12 and appeared to have the Merchant zone solved as they garnered many easy buckets. In the second frame the Sheffield team outscored the Beemen 21-20 to close the gap, giving the Restaurant boys a narrow five point gap at the midway mark. Sheffield continued their all-out effort to overtake the leaders in the third frame as they began to muster control of the boards. The margin dwindled to three points at the end of the third stanza and a real see-saw battle in the last quarter was underway. Kolesar, Labesky and Vashaw led the last quarter surge for the Merchants as the Busy Bee continually fired up some misguided shots. In the final minute of play Vashaw hit on a pair of foul shots to put the Merchants ahead and the Beemen could never recover. Drexler stepped to the line in the last three seconds with a chance to put the Busy Bee aggregation in the game but his first attempt went wide and the game was over.

Bob Kolesar and Don Labesky paced the Sheffield aggregation with 25 and 23 points and Ed Lindberg was the Beemen's big gun with 26. Sam Koebley notched 14 for the Busy Bee also.

BLUEBERRY SIZZLES THE CORDS FOR A 110 - 65 WIN

The Blueberry Hill Inn garnered their first win in Y City League action Monday night and it was a big one. The Innmen annihilated the Unknown team, 110-65, scoring 66 points in the second half of the run-away.

The game was respectable in the first half with Blueberry owning a five point margin at the end of the first eight minutes of play. In the second frame they began to hit with more consistency with Dickie Danielson finding the rim time after time.

The Unknowns completely collapsed in the second half, letting the victors run wild with 31 points in the third frame and a tremendous 35 points in the concluding period. The fast-breaking quintet came down the court again and again pouring the ball through the hoop.

Dick Danielson's 39 points was the evening's high and Ben Obinger and Bob Schenk chipped in with 25 and 22 for the winners. Homan with 20 and Angove with 16 led the Unknown team.

In Thursday night's action Sheffield will face Blueberry in the big contest at 7 and Busy Bee will match skills with the Unknowns at 8. Interest in the City League is at high pitch as the league is one of the strongest in years.

EARLY DEER RETURNS

The Game Commission reports that the overall early hunting hours and the total harvest in those hours

IF FIRE STRIKES, GET EVERYONE OUT OF HOUSE

The important thing, if fire strikes, is getting everybody out of the house, especially during the Christmas season when you may have house guests.

The National Board of Fire Underwriters has prepared these suggestions for fire safety, and what to do if a fire breaks out:

1. Decide now on how you would be able to save your family's and guests' lives if you were to awake and smell smoke tonight.

2. Figure out two possible routes to the ground from any upstairs bedroom. It is unlikely that both escape routes would be cut off by flames during the early stage of the fire.

3. If a fire starts, arouse everyone in the house. Make it your first duty to get everyone out of the house.

4. Then — when everyone is out — call the fire department.

5. Have the fire department number posted at your telephone.

6. Know the location of the fire alarm box nearest your home.

and if they didn't plug each other. That is a tremendous concentration of high powered rifles in one county's deer acres for three days. If such concentrated hunting is good, what is wrong with two weeks of shoot-anything hunting? The trophy hunter still will settle for nothing else, and the meat hunter will help the herd by bringing in what he wanted. What's wrong with making the customers happy and the herd healthier?

And that about winds it up until the day after Christmas when you can hunt rabbits again. Both cottontails and hares will be legal game from December 26 to January 2. Otherwise it now is for the trappers and those who enjoy fishing in the cold . . . and through the ice if we get some.

HOW WILL IT COMPARE
Always at this time of year we wonder how the deer kill compares with other seasons. Two years ago we had the record buck kill 49,254. And last year wasn't bad, 46,738, which we believe was about the third best in state history.

On the doe side we have some big years to beat, but there have been too many closed seasons to create a comparative average. Back in 1938 the hunters shot 171,662 antlerless deer, but there was no buck season. Previous to that, in 1931, they shot 70,255. Last year the doe figure was 65,187.

The biggest total kill was in 1940 when 40,995 bucks and 145,580 antlerless animals were brought in for a total of 186,575. The doe kill of 1938 mentioned above was second best, and in 1949 the total was 130,723.

The total kill for the past two years has been 111,925 for 1958 and 105,116 for 1957. Weather permitting the figures probably will run close to these for 1959.

Dragons Notch Second over Erie Academy

Two foul shots by Doug Lind in the final minute of play earned the Warren High Dragons a well-deserved victory over the Erie Academy Lions last Friday evening by the score of 48-46. The second half of the contest saw the lead see-saw back and forth as the exuberant throng readily applauded the thrilling play. Lind sank his charity tosses and the Dragons retained possession of the ball for the majority of the final minute to deprive their opponents of a tie and possible win.

Warren took an 11-6 lead in the opening quarter of the battle as the visitors displayed some wild shooting and the duo of Redding and Hunter were nabbing the rebounds. Redding had ten rebounds and Hunter nine in the opening eight minutes of play.

The two quintets battled even in the second stanza, both squads notching 18 points, making the half-time score read Warren 29, Erie 24. The five point lead was short lived, however, as the Erie boys quickly knotted the score in the early minutes of the third period. From that point on it was nip and tuck, each team matching buckets. Harris and Redding exchanged buckets to keep the score at 38 all. With the screaming throng on their feet the Lions scored two quick markers but Lind nullified them with two points from the foul stripe. John Barr then hit on a jump to give the Blue and White a 46-44 edge, but the visitors retaliated to tie the game at 46-46.

It was at this stage in the game that Lind dropped in his crucial foul markers. Erie's Jim Miller was fouled but couldn't cash in and the Massmen again regained possession of the ball. With fifteen seconds remaining in the tussle Lind was again fouled but he was not accurate. The taller Blue and White five grabbed the ball off the boards and retained control of the ball until the final buzzer sounded, throwing the gymnasium into pandemonium.

Academy's failure to even score one foul toss cost them valuable points and possession of the ball. Dragons on the other hand played heads-up ball for the most part of the game, an improvement over their earlier scrambles. Doug Lind led Warren scoring with 13. The starting five which played the entire 32 minutes split the scoring evenly, a good sign of solid team play. Elmer Woodward, with his quick jumpers, and Jim Miller with 16 and 12 points respectively led the Lions point-making.
